

The Ghost of Christmas Present has a new buddy Traveling Ghost of Crude Oil Future, named th' Drought Maker & Bringer of Earthquakes

When crude oil is discovered, at first the super weight of the aboveground over the subterranean cavern deposit is enough to pressure an oil gusher high into the air. After capping & pumping the oil for a while, oil pressure drops, requiring other means to be used to force oil up to the drilling platform's waiting supertankers. I have never worked on an oil rig but it has been my understanding that, once this natural pressure is used up, the drilling company has the workers pump water down into the cavern, both pressuring and floating the crude oil up & out into the pipeline. Otherwise they would be losing money leaving many millions of barrels of crude oil in the ground. Even Exxon-Mobil could go bankrupt, or Philips Petroleum or Shell.

Could pumping 1/2 trillion barrels of water into the ground and out of Earth's drinking water cycle cause a world class drought?

Yesterday (2/14/2008) the president of Venezuela was in the nation's News and he was very angry, even threatening the U.S. that he was soon going to raise the price of his country's "Orinoco Belt" oil deposit under southern Venezuela estimated to be a whopper 250,000,000,000+ billion barrels. According to the latest Energy Information Administration the "world's proved reserves of oil" on their EIA website this link, that 250 x 10<sup>9</sup> estimate is a good deal higher than their 52 billion proved barrels, so his threat is based more on an estimate.

What did Jesus say about earthquakes and famine again?

Jesus is quoted in Bible scripture (Matthew 24) as saying there will be many "earthquakes in one place after another" but of course that is just prophecy, not a detailed explanation as to why he could have known or it might come to pass one day. Jesus did NOT say many things also, so a Bible student earnestly searching for "Bible Truth" sometimes needs a knowledgeable someone to help figure things out. He said famines would be really bad, so we can extrapolate from that we would at some point in his future be experiencing an awesome world drought causing crop failures in Africa. Australia has been in severe drought for years while here in the United States the southern areas of Georgia, North & South Carolina, Tennessee and surrounding States also were taking a hit to their reservoirs in 2007. In other words a creeping world drought is traveling the planet causing much distress in our time like a ghost of death. Jesus' prophecy was included in Revelation 6 as a rider on a horse. What we now know is that this Armageddon-like world drought situation could be being magnified by our satan-addictive Crude Oil Energy Reliance ~and our subsequent double raping of both h<sub>2</sub>o + Oil of the Earth to have all the crude we want~ is causing Death by Energy Gluttony. The "End is Near"? Yes, but is God causing it? or our own out of control "System of Things" usual gluttonous we-can-have-it-all mentality?
